The first dozen or so levels are fun but the game quickly turns into a frustrating, RNG hell. In the later levels, adjusting a bridge segment by a pixel could cause it to collapse. (Not all levels are like this!) but the "jump the gap levels" are virtually pixel perfect. Additionally, the hydraulics menu occasionally bugs out, causing a soft-lock and forcing you to relaunch. Lastly, the global leader boards are full of obviously fake scores that go ignored by the dev team. The free to play mobile knock-offu2019s have the same entertainment value, just save your money and pass this cash grab.. This game might be easier for engineers, architects or physicists, which is not definitely me who doesn't pay attention in the physics classes. Even though, it's fun to see my bridges breaking down. This game is a puzzle game which let you express your own thinking, problem solving and creativity. If you like this kind of game, or wanting to see things break down, just buy it.
